Miriam de Búrca (b. 1972)

Miriam de Búrca makes meticulous drawings which explore hidden histories and confront current political realities. Her most recent series focus on monuments, protest and climate change, as well as cillíní (burial sites in Ireland), and the persisting divisions in Northern Ireland and Ireland, particularly over Brexit. These drawings document the wildlife, plants, memorials and people from the places she is investigating, and can be viewed as forensic portraits of a site.

De Búrca was born in Munich, Germany and is now based in Galway, Ireland. She studied for her BA in Fine Art at Glasgow School of Art and did her Masters in Fine Art at University of Ulster. In 2010 she completed a practice-based Ph.D. at the University of Ulster. Her drawings and experimental film and video-works have been exhibited nationally and internationally in places such as Belfast, Dublin, London, New York, Montreal, Tel Aviv, Warsaw and Berlin. In 2021 she was included in Vitamin D3: Today's Best in Contemporary Drawing, published by Phaidon. Works acquired by the British Museum, London currently feature in a UK touring exhibition of contemporary drawing.
